

I support media diversity

I am concerned that broadcast media ownership will be concentrated in the hands of the few. This country has thrived on diversity of opinions.

Changing the rules governing broadcast media ownership only benefits the very largest corporations and does nothing to foster free thinking.

Broadcast media ownership should be limited geographically to prevent the abuse of power. Consolidating the power of the broadcast media industry in the hands of the few is nothing more than an attempt at controlling the minds of Americans. Remember, you, the FCC, work for the American people.

If corporations could be trusted to always be fair and unbiased, we wouldn't need the FCC. The fact is these corporations can't control themselves. For the public good we established the FCC to look out for American consumers. Do what is right for American consumers or resign so someone else can do it for you!

Very truly,

J.C. Ackerman
St. Pete Beach, Fl.